

UPC Volunteer Board 2011-2012

What the heck is the BLOB anyway?

BLOB (n.)- A group of diverse volunteers within the University Program Council who help promote and build the brand of the organization while developing skills in leadership, service, teamwork, communication and self-improvement.

Ok...so what exactly are the benefits of volunteering?

Not only will the BLOB allow you first hand access to the exclusive programs that UPC puts on, but you will also have the chance to have tons of fun, make new friends, gain volunteer hours, and even allow you the potential to become a leader around your UNT campus!

Hmm, interesting. So what are the qualifications needed to become a member of the UPC BLOB volunteer board?

Anyone can sign up to become a member of the BLOB! Freshman, Senior...doesn't matter. All that we ask is that our members remain committed and reliable throughout their involvement within the organization.

How will I know if the BLOB is right for me?

Within the volunteer board, we have different committees that were established in order to fit the different interests of our volunteers. These committees range anywhere from the Marketing Committee, Films Committee, Membership Committee, Current Events Committee, etc.

Enough said! Where do I sign up?

To sign up, please join UPC at our weekly BLOB meetings scheduled every Tuesday at 5 p.m. or just stop by the UPC office (Union 2nd floor, Rm. 216-O) and grab a form from the front desk receptionist. Don't forget to cross your T's and dot your I's!
